

Pop Quiz! It's the Year in Review

It's May, and you know what that means: it's final exam season. To help make you feel like a kid again, Genome Technology culled through news from the past year to put together this trivia crossword.

How well did you pay attention in the last 12 months?

ACROSS

2. NCI unveiled this genome-wide association database last winter
4. This array company let investors know it was planning to have an IPO
6. The owner of this yacht took over his former institute last fall, where his ex-wife was president at the time
7. Scientists from this country won the iGEM, or International Genetically Engineered Machine, competition in November
8. Deirdre Meldrum left the University of Washington for sunnier climes here
9. Next-gen sequencing company picked up by Applied Biosystems in a $120 million buyout.
11. In a deal announced this spring, Agilent expects to acquire this company
12. The brainchild of Brian Gilman, this networking site could give MySpace some competition in the scientific community

13. After years of running the healthcare and life sciences business for IBM, this woman headed to Burrill & Company

DOWN

1. Best known for its competition in personal spaceflight, this organization has set its sights on the cheap genome sequencing
3. _____ Beauty: Genome launched its dance tour at Wesleyan University
5. This pair took a trip to Stockholm for a certain prize last fall
10. After years of fighting with Palm Beach County, the outpost of this California institute was finally assigned land

